

Some Sense?

Success is reached by eliminating all that does not count and putting all your energy to the best pursuits.

An Irishman was weeding a potato patch and accidentally swallowed a potato bug. As Pat did not want the insect roaming around inside of him, he adopted what he considered a very good plan to prevent such proceedings. Ten minutes later a friend came by and found Pat curled up at the edge of the potato patch seemingly in terrible agony, and asked, "What is the matter, Pat?" He answered, "Oh heds the ill luck to swallow a potato bug awhile ago, then of swallowed some paris grane to kill the baste and he's raisin' the very devil inside of me yet, he is."

After a bride's supply of wearing apparel is beginning to be exhausted, her husband finds how dear she really is to him.

A newly wed wife was asked if she could make lemon pie and she answered, "Indeed I won't, I read the recipe in my new cook book and it said, 'to set on the stove and stir constantly'. I should think any one would stir constantly."

"Honest endeavor was never thrown away. God gathers our failures day by day. And weaves them into His perfect plan. In a way that is not for us to scan."

—Success Magazine.

Willie—"Chirpie, I think a lot of you but some things have got to stop, or, well it won't be good for you. Everything I have did lately, ma has found out and when I ask her how she found out, she always says that a little bird told her. Now Chirpie, you're the only little bird around here, and I'm going through the cupboard from top to bottom and if ma finds it out you'll decorate the inside of a cat."

Money talks and some times the man that marries it finds that it talks too much.

I had a young lady proof reader once and when I wrote quoting a medical authority, "A person should gargle after being kissed," she corrected (?) it by making it read "gurgle". What do you think of that?

The thorns which tear a man most, usually are of his own planting.

Two Irishmen had just come from Ireland and stopped at a hotel one night when Pat heard a great noise outside. Upon rising he saw a fire engine go by and then two more and awakened his friend, Mike, exclaiming, "Mike they are moving Hell and three loads have gone by already."

Editor Landy of the Buffalo Lake (Mich.) News, feeling the need of a sack of barley, advertised in his newspaper that he would give a year's subscription for same. A mean cuss in an adjoining village filled a tobacco sack with barley and sent it to Landy, who stood pat and sent him the news and a subscription receipt for a year.

"When I see a youth with his pants turned up and his beautiful socks in view, And over one eye perched a little round hat, With a ribbon of mauve or blue, And the fourteen rings and the seven pins, That he got at his dear prep school: Why it strikes a chord and I say— Oh! Lord, Was I ever that big a fool!"

—Gerald Sullivan.

A teacher in one of our public schools caught the janitor in a falsehood and asked him, "Where do you think you will go if you tell falsehoods?" He replied, "well, I dunno but I suppose I will be building fires for school teachers."

The local Woman's Club offered a prize for the best essay on, "How to Make Your Husband Happy." A spinster of 57 won and her essay contained only three words, "feed the brute."

YOUR BEST FRIEND.

How Few of Us Appreciate Our Mothers as We Should.

To THE TRIBUNE:

Montgomery, Mo., February 25.

What a pity that more of the children of to-day—not only in Montgomery, but everywhere—do not have more love and appreciation for their parents, especially their mothers. Of course old Dad gets out and hustlers, surmounting the obstacles and overcoming the difficulties of the busy world that he may provide for his house, but dear mother's work is never done. And many children are so immersed with their pleasure-seeking and indifferent that they never stop and thank, much less help, their tired and self-sacrificing mothers, without whom they would be "like a child crying in the night with no language but a cry." Such children will never be what they should be in this world. Their very indifference and lack of appreciation of what is done for them while they are helpless and dependent is and will continue to be a serious impediment in their progress through life. Mark that boy or girl who does not forget mother and father, and watch how the sunlight of heaven seems to beam across his or her pathway! There is something in them, something to them. They seem to have the elements of success hid away in their very being. God foreordained it. You never saw or heard of a great man, a great womanly woman who did appreciate mother and father, especially mother. God foreordained it. But after all, maybe the parents are mostly to blame in that they have not from the earliest hour inculcated in the minds of their children the sound and wholesome doctrine of "honoring mother and father, the first commandment with promise."

How the writer wishes he could recall mother, who has long since fallen asleep. How we would like to see her dear old face and hear her kind and loving voice once more. How we would like to tell her how we love her and appreciate the great sacrifices she made for us; how little we did when she was with us, compared to what we ought to have done, to make her life bright and her burdens lighter. Perhaps we can atone somewhat by dropping these broken lines to those here in Montgomery who still have mother with them, warning and admonishing them to take heed lest they let these things slip until it is too late. Tell mother and father, too, that you love them and will obey them, and if they have already gone and left you on the beaten shores of time ask God to lead you on, o'er moor and fen, until the night is gone, and then with those angel faces you shall abide in the "house not made with hands."

Miss Gertrude Baker, of Wellsville, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Geo. Jones, this week.

Revived in His Coffin.

A strange case of revivification was that of John Adams of Del Rio, East Tennessee. Adams is a mining engineer and one morning he was found in bed apparently dead. A physician said it was a case of heart failure. The body was made ready for interment and relatives and friends in Philadelphia were notified. A check was received from Philadelphia in payment of the undertaker's bill, but the undertaker declined to accept anything save the hard cash. This caused further delay, and while waiting the coming of the money by express the eyes of the "corpse" opened, there was a yawn and there likewise was a sudden disappearance of the undertaker and others from the room. Mr. Adams recovered and is still alive.

Living Up to His Name.

A teacher in a mission school in Boston had among her pupils a colored boy named Ralph Waldo Emerson Longfellow. As he was absent one Sunday she asked the class if any one knew the reason for his absence. "I reckon I do," said one small serious-looking boy. "What is the reason, Johnnie?" "I guess he's home writing poetry," responded the boy, with a delighted chuckle.—Youth's Companion.

Its Lasting Effect.

"Rippling, did you ever convert anybody to your way of thinking by your street-corner oratory?" "I know of one, anyhow, and it made a changed man of him." "What is he doing now?" "He's in the insane asylum, Ruggles; in the insane asylum. A glimpse of the truth was too much for his modernized intellect."—Chicago Tribune.

The Temperance Meeting

The Temperance meeting at the Baptist Church last Sunday afternoon was largely attended and very interesting. The program was published in the TRIBUNE last week.

Rev. J. E. Kerr's address was very forcible and to the point. He flogged the liquor traffic from "Dan to Beersheba". He talked about the conditions in Montgomery County as well as in general. Mrs. Mattie A. Faulconer paid a tribute to Frances E. Willard and to the deceased President of the W. C. T. U. of Missouri, Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman. She said that Mrs. Clara E. Stokes would fill the office until the State Convention when she may be elected President. The local Temperance meetings seem to be gaining in interest. The musical program of Sunday's meeting was especially good.

Fresh bread, pies and cakes every day at J. F. Hassler's bakery.

A Sad Result.

A St. Louis paper says that Mrs. August Conrad, widow of the saloon keeper killed by Jas. McLaughlin, whose father resides in Montgomery county, was adjudged insane by a jury in the Olney Probate Court Monday. She is a patient in the Female Hospital. Two of her children are in a county orphanage, and two others one of them born a few days before the killing of Conrad, are being cared for by her former neighbors.

Her mind was unbalanced by the shock of her husband's tragic death, and she first wandered away from home, then, returning, barricaded the house until she and the children were near starvation. The saloon keeper is to be pitied, especially in the larger cities. Their lives are in great danger from those who embibe too freely. The report that Mrs. Conrad's father resided also in Montgomery was a mistake.

Nice line of High Grade candies and cigars at J. F. Hassler's.

Woman's Wiles.

"Yes," confided Mrs. A., "I find it very profitable to give my husband a dressing down occasionally. I gave him one to-day." "But how is it profitable?" queried Mrs. Z. "Why, he generally gives me a dressing up." "Dressing up?" "Yes; to get me in good humor again he promises me a new coat, a new set of furs and a new hat."

Faults of Friends.

Don't flatter yourselves that friendship authorizes you to say disagreeable things to your intimates. On the contrary, the nearer you come into relation with a person, the more necessary do tact and courtesy become. Except in cases of necessity, which are rare, leave your friend to learn unpleasant truths from his enemies; they are ready enough to tell them.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

True Economy.

Economy is generosity in little things. Some women by the magic of their habits can make a dime go further than others can make a dollar. These have a sense of fitness and nice arrangement. They can contrive to so manage that they always seem to be flourishing. These are the women who make simple homes beautiful and bright, giving a comment not found in those of more pretentious claims.

Curiosity.

Mr. Stubb—Yes, Maria, 20 years is supposed to elapse between the third and fourth acts. Mrs. Stubbs—Do tell! Then we must certainly stay. Mr. Stubb—Ah, you are interested in the play? Mrs. Stubbs—Yes, I want to see the change in the style of hat the heroine wears.

All the More Deserving.

Woman of the House—A big, strong man like you going around begging! You ought to be ashamed of yourself! Tufford Knutt (touching his eyes with a grimy handkerchief)—I am, mum. It mortifies me 'most to death. Folks ginerly treats me well on that account, mum.

GAVE HIS NAME TO VEHICLE.

Army Doctor First to See Possibilities of "Buckboard."

"There are few persons who know how the name of 'buckboard' came to be applied to a vehicle," says a writer. "It was 'way back in the '20s, when the transportation of goods, wares and merchandise was almost entirely by wagon. A Dr. Buck was then in charge of military stores en route to army posts in the southwest. In east Tennessee much difficulty was experienced by reason of the rough roads and there were frequent mishaps, mostly from wagons overturning. Dr. Buck overhauled the outfit and, abandoning the wagon bodies, long boards were set directly on the axles or hung below and the stores were loaded in such a manner that there were no further delays from breakdowns and the stores safely reached their destinations. In special emergency, too, the load could be shifted or taken off in a hurry. Dr. Buck's example was followed, especially when roads were rough, and soon much hauling was done by the use of wheels, axles and boards only. Now we have the buckboard, both in carriage and automobile forms, conforming closely to the original idea, though few suspect the source of it."

BRIDE BALKED AT THE ALTAR.

Massachusetts Girl Refused to Wed Count and Denounced Him.

At St. Stanislaus' church, Fall River, Mass., Angela Pawlow, daughter of a merchant, absolutely refused to go on with the marriage ceremony that was to unite her to Basil Mullinski, who says he is a Polish count and the owner of an estate in Russia. The marriage had been set for eight o'clock. The church was crowded with friends and relatives. The bridegroom had answered an exultant "Yes" to the usual question, and the bride, in a white silk wedding dress with long veil and wedding bouquet, seemed to smile as Father Basin turned to her and asked: "Will thou take unto thee this man to be thy lawfully wedded husband?" The bride dropped her hand from the arm of the bridegroom. She turned and faced the crowded church and answered loudly: "No; he has been unfaithful to me before marriage. I will not marry him." Then the girl ran down the aisle to her mother. The audience was dumfounded. Before it really appreciated what had happened the church officials had cleared the church.

Bill Nye and Queen Victoria.

Years ago the late Bill Nye wrote a cordial and complimentary letter to Queen Victoria, urging her to come to America and take part in certain authors' readings in aid of the international copyright movement. The letter was written primarily for publication, of course, and in all likelihood never reached the august eye for which it professed to be intended. It filled a newspaper column, however, and served its purpose as an excellent bit of fooling. The writer assured her majesty of a hearty welcome from her fellow authors in the United States, all of whom, he said, had been greatly impressed, not only by the merit of her literary work, but by the fact that she produced it all at night—"after reigning all day on a hard throne." Throughout the many years that she continued to "reign on a hard throne," she was an indefatigable worker herself and the inspirer of industry in others.—Putnam's Magazine.

The Emblem of France.

The origin of the fleur-de-lis is still an unsettled question. There are many theories, but no two of them agree. One makes the emblem originate with Clovis I., another with Louis VII., another with one of the German kings of the twelfth century and still another with the Romans. All that is definitely settled is the fact that since the twelfth century the fleur-de-lis has been employed as the emblem of French royalty. The nature of the emblem is also in dispute. An old tradition makes it the representation of the lily given by the angel to Clovis at his baptism. Another theory is that it was adopted by Louis VII. in allusion to his name, Louis Fleur-de-lis.—New York American.
